Navasota is as proud as a peacock because Danforth of the Philadelphia Athletics once pitched a game there.

Senator Bailey's answer to the report that he would resign was not a denial but an evasion. He can resign if he wants to without breaking his word.

Roosevelt says he won't make any more speeches if he can avoid it. This is easily explained; he doesn't get the crowds and the applause that he used to receive.

Tarrant county is expending a million for good roads and half a million for bridges. No wonder Fort Worth is a progressive city and one of the best markets for farm products in the Southwest.

It is perhaps nothing but idle curiosity, but if any of the churches would announce that a good soloist would sing "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," they would be pretty sure of a full house.

An Oklahoma woman secured a divorce on the ground that her husband hadn't spoken to her for a year. We know a man and woman who have been married over twenty years and have never spoken to each other.

President Taft's electioneering tour was a failure because his explanations of the discrepancy between his promises and his acts on the wool tariff didn't pull the wool over the eyes of the people.

An ex-convict who is known to have killed a family of five in Kansas and is believed to have previously murdered nine other people, is at large. Such a monster is more terrible than the most ferocious beast and should be killed on sight.

The government weather bureau is still further discredited by the failure of its prediction of fair weather yesterday for the ball game at Philadelphia. The people are paying those weather sharps big salaries for bad guessing.

To the question whether he is a candidate for the presidency Champ Clark returned an evasive answer, which is construed to mean that he is a candidate, regardless of the fact that the Missouri state convention, over which he presided, endorsed former Governor Folk. This smacks of mala fide.

There is no call for anybody to have conviction fits because Secretary of Agriculture Wilson made a talk at the International Brewers' Congress. It has never yet been proved that the making of beer is not a legitimate business and that it may not be conducted in such a way as to be beneficial to the human race.

The illustrated Tourist edition of the Havana (Cuba) Post is one of the most artistic pieces of newspaper work and one of the most complete in all its details that we have ever seen. It is as full of information about the city of Havana and the island of Cuba as an egg is of meat. It is the only paper exclusively for English-speaking readers published on the island.

James D. Richardson, former congressman from Tennessee, has taken all the degrees and is now the high-muckamuck of all the Masons of the Southern division. Even when a boy Jim Richardson displayed a strong penchant for secret society doings. On one occasion, this scribe presided over a college fraternity when Jim was initiated.

It was unfortunate that the joint good roads conference between the county commissioners and the good roads committee of the Commercial Club, which was to have been held yesterday, had to be postponed on account of Judge Board's illness. Another date should be agreed upon, and the conference should be held as soon as practicable.

Two wealthy Baptist laymen in a Western town have won golden opinions among the brethren by leaving a fair in progress at home to attend an association of their church more than a hundred miles away. One of their church papers says: "This is a good illustration of what it means to seek first the kingdom of God." But some of us are heathenish enough to believe that a properly conducted fair is also an integral part of the kingdom of God.

President Hooper of the National Brewers' Association in his annual address said: "The people of the United States are aroused as they perhaps never have been before to the evils of intemperance and the abuses in the conduct of the retail trade. Thoughtful men, experienced in public affairs, are earnestly seeking for a solution of these problems. We must be ready to co-operate with them both in word and deed, and we must show that we are equipped to render such service with the greatest efficiency." It is as certain as anything can be in human affairs that the retail liquor dealers will have to clean house or they will have to go.

The wild geese and cranes are winging southward and Rodgers is soaring westward over Texas.

Taft is urged to fire one Wilson. Whether he does so or not, the indications are that another Wilson will fire Taft on the 4th of March, 1913.

Everybody would be in favor of publicity provided each one could be exempted from having his own meanness shown up.

Can't those high and mighty state officers at Austin keep that disgraceful row among them out of the newspapers? It is emitting a mighty bad odor.

The rain at Philadelphia yesterday showed that guessing at the final result of the championship series is as safe as guessing at the weather—perhaps safer.

It isn't safe to be too sure of anything in human affairs. It looks now as if the presidency were Woodrow Wilson's, but something may happen, or there may be something now not in sight, that will change the whole situation.

The governors of all the cotton states will attend the cotton conference in New Orleans except the chief executive of Florida, and he will appoint delegates to represent his state. If they will stick to cotton and leave politics alone they may do something worth while.

Brazos county can't contain a tenth part of its beautiful October weather. There is so much of the delightful thing that it is spreading out all over Texas. And some of the newspapers in other towns are too mean to give the credit for it to Brazos county, where it rightfully belongs.

The insinuations by some of our exchanges that Bailey wrote Wolters's platform and Campbell wrote Ramsey's are wholly gratuitous and inexcusable. All well informed people know that neither Colonel Wolters nor Judge Ramsey is a fool nor any man's puppet. Such uncalled for insinuations are not creditable to those who make them, and they are a disgrace to Texas journalism.

Speaking of the death of his sister, which was announced in yesterday's news service, Center Fielder Oldring of the Philadelphia Athletics said: "My first impulse was to jump to New York, but considering the matter calmly I have decided to stick to the team. It may seem strange for me to play baseball with my sister dead, but I can do her no good, and at this critical period of the world's series I feel I had better remain with the team." Who will challenge the rectitude of this decision? Neither our pleasures nor our sorrows should be permitted to interfere with the performance of our duties to others. This is the lesson in the words of Jesus to the disciple who asked leave to go and bury his father: "Let the dead bury their dead."

SALES DAY AT BEDIAS.

Yesterday was "Sales Day" at Bedias and we understand that thriving little village was filled with folks from every direction. Many beautiful colts and horses were brought in and exhibited and several coops of highly bred fowls were to be seen. Nothing so tends to the advancement of all lines of livestock as occasional exhibition days. It is a pity we do not have a regular county fair once each year. It would be worth many dollars to the people.—Navasota Examiner-Review.
